HOPPER SYSTEM OF FEEDING

Begin by Supplying Dry Mash and Later Include Grains-Feed Oats for Bone and Muscle.

At this time of the year if it has his home in St. Jeseph from injuries not previously been done, the hopper system of feeding should be duced for the growing chicks. Begin by supplying the hoppers with dry mash and later include grains, especially oats. Some tell us that their chicks will not eat outs, but there is nothing better for growing bone and muscle. Hopper feeding greatly lessens the amount of labor in caring for chicks and gives the smaller and weaker chicks an equal chance at the feed with the others.

(By H. L. GARRIGUS, Connecticut Ex-A creep or hurdle should be arranged to protect a trough in which is kept for the exclusive use of the lambs, a supply of mixed grain. This should consist of corn, five parts; eats, two parts; bran, two parts, and off meal, one part. Some tine clover or alfalfa hay should also be accessible. The ewes should be encouraged to keep up a good flow of milk, as this, too, is an important factor in the development of a good lamb.

Lambs reared in this way are less apt to suffer from stomach worms; command a higher price per pound.

and those that are selected to remain in the flock are larger and more vigorous, develop a heavier flace and argenerally a source of profit and satisfaction.

Too frequently the flock master is tempted to butcher the largest and fattest lambs for the extra value represented in the immediate sale. This is a grave mistake, and should never be practiced if a good breeding flock is to be maintained. The same cureful attention should be puld to selection as is used in the selection of dairy cattle and laying heas. Wool at 35 cents and lambs touching $13.10 per hundred on foot and wholesale should result in more interest in sheep husbandry, particularly where the labor problem is a serious one and the need of some kind of live stock is felt.
